My Kamome Coloring Book

Where is Rikuzentakata?
Where is Crescent City?

Draw a line showing how Kamome got to California.

Here are some of the people who live in Rikuzentakata. Can you tell what they do by what they are wearing?

Here are some of the people who live in Crescent City. What do you think they do? Draw yourself into the picture.

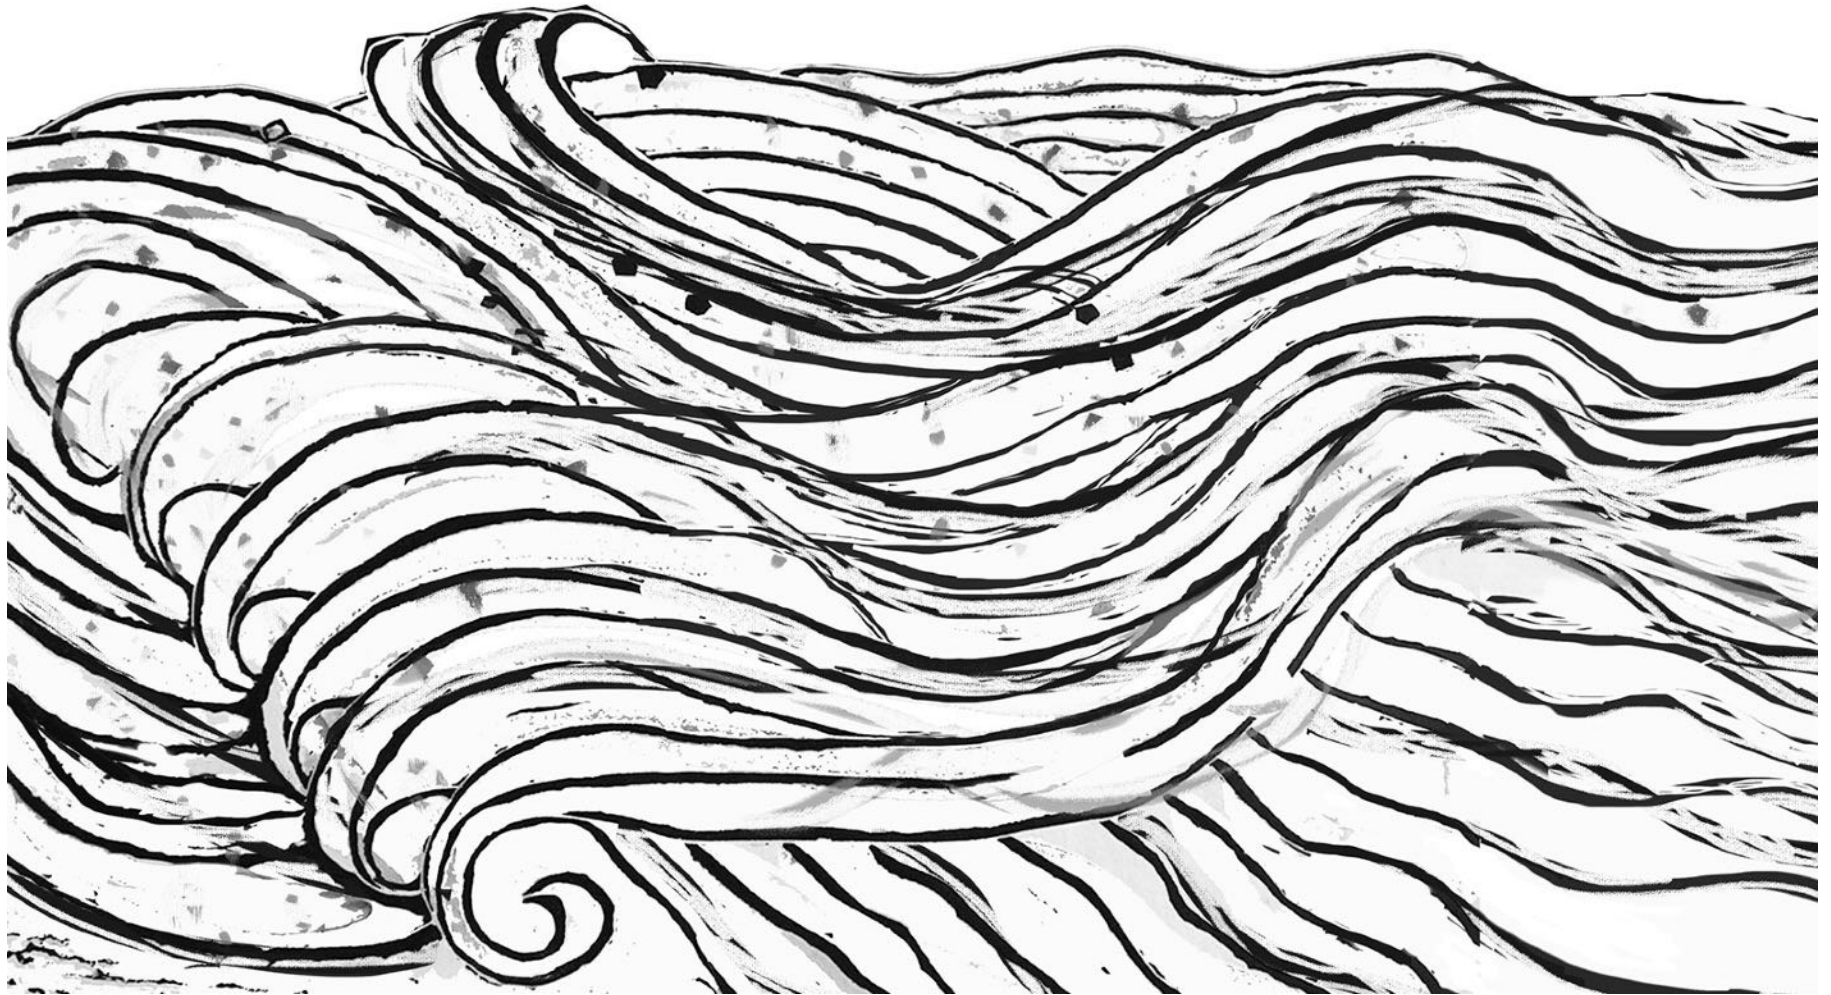

Kamome helped Takata High School students learn to work in harbors. Would you like to join them? Draw yourself in the boat. Be sure to wear a life jacket!

Earthquakes happen in both Japan and California. You can protect yourself by getting under a desk or table and holding on. Why don't you join Emily and Jose under the table? Can you draw yourself in the empty space?

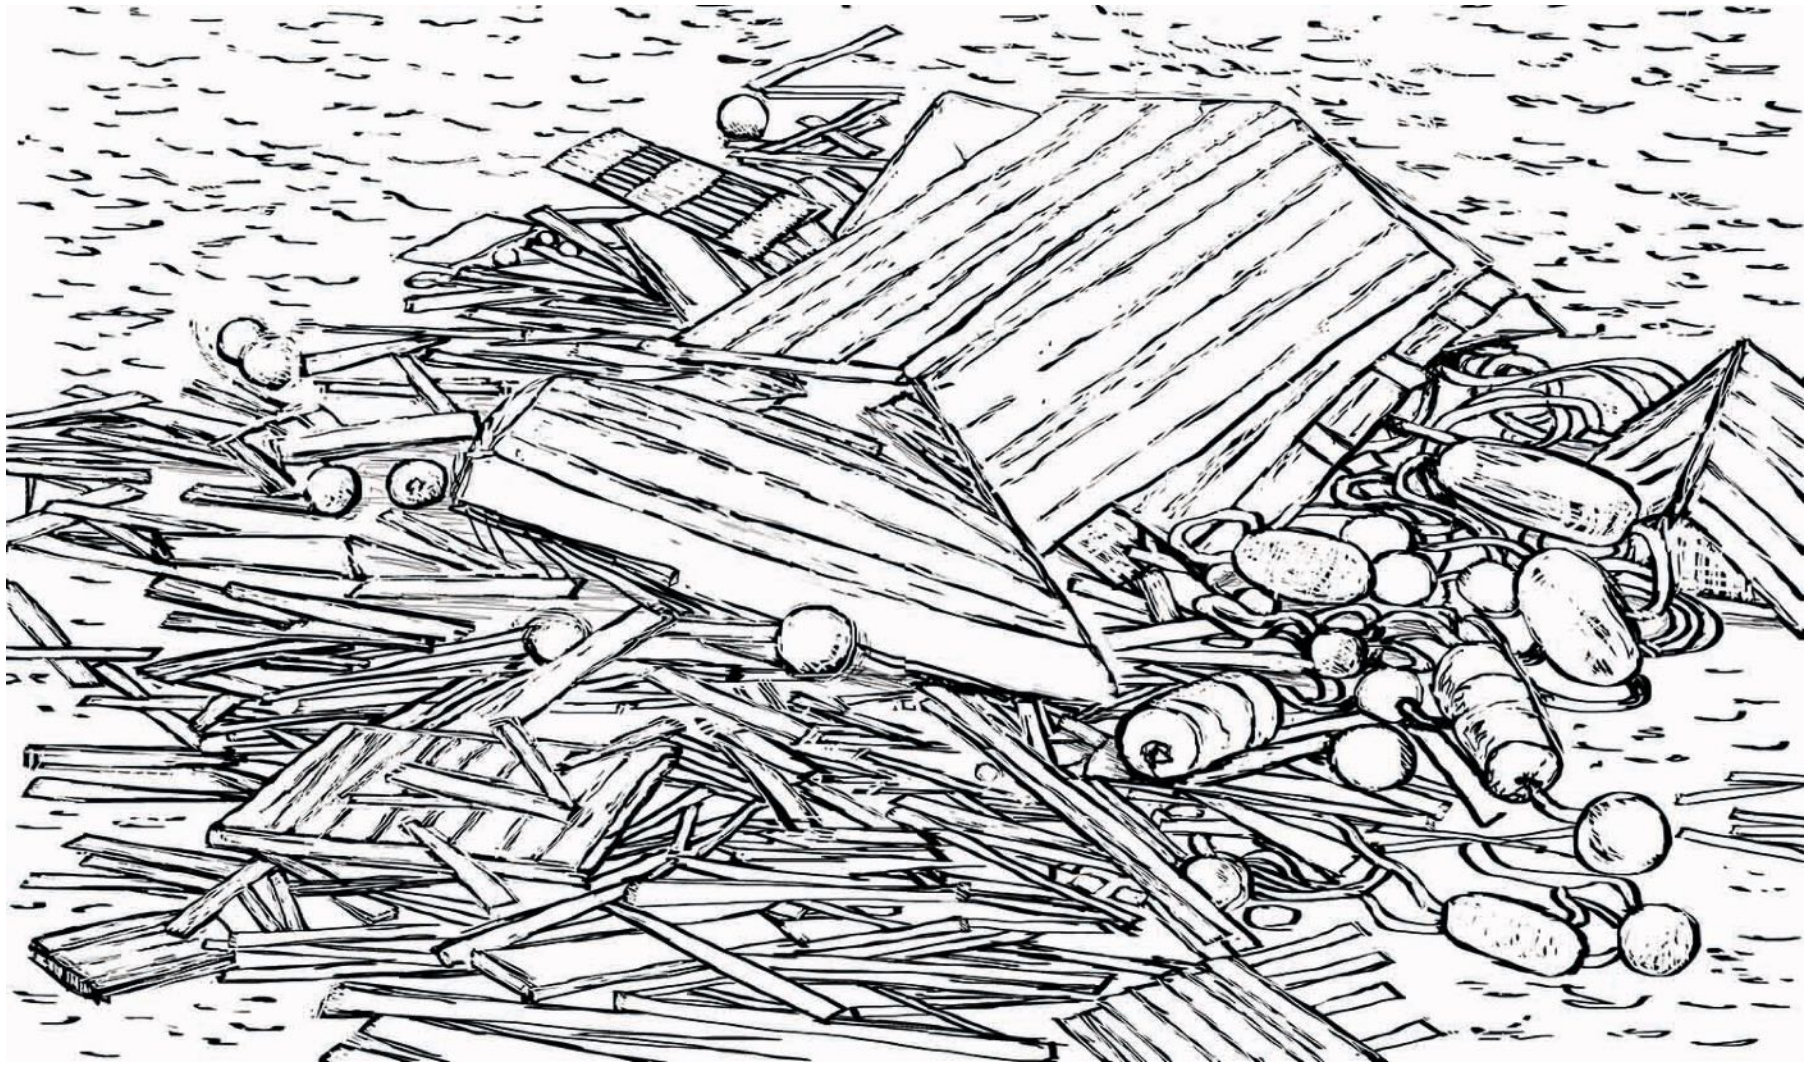

Luis is a student at Del Norte High School. He keeps his schoolbooks in his backpack. He also has emergency supplies. What is he carrying today? Do you think he should have something else? Draw it into the picture.

One day there was a very big earthquake in Japan. The people in Rikuzentakata felt the ground shake and shake and shake. The earthquake caused a tsunami.

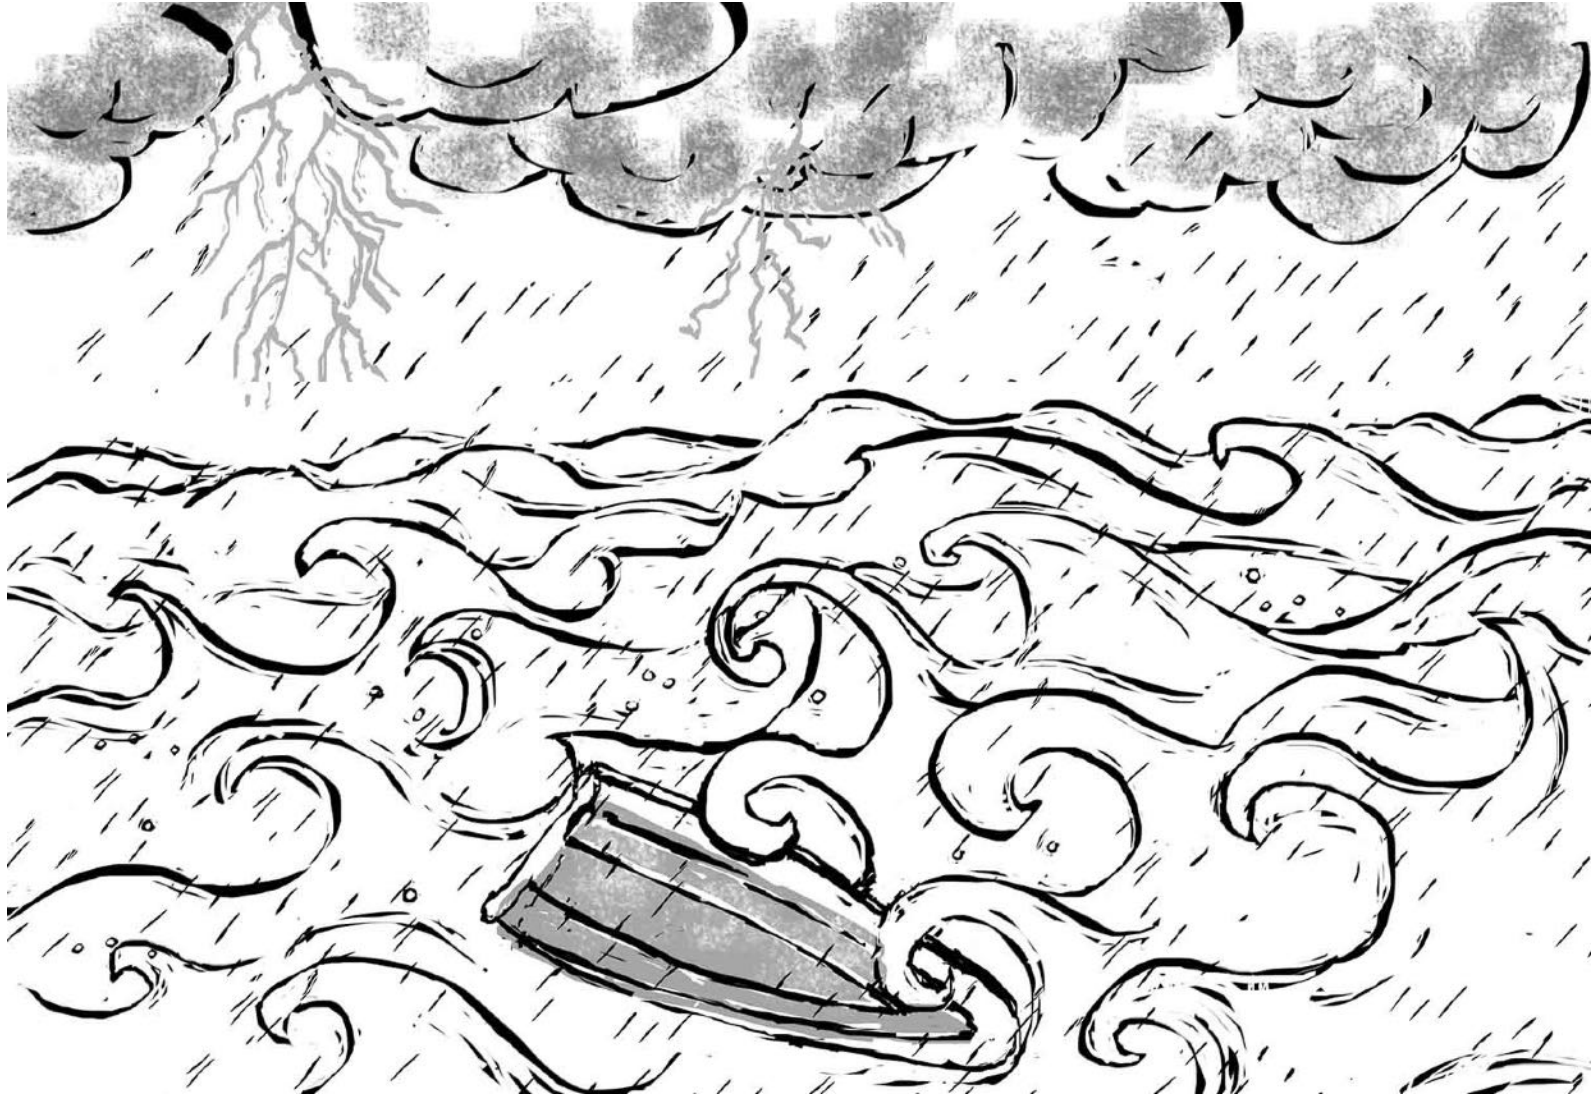

Earthquake shaking is a warning that a tsunami may be on its way. Tsunami hazard zone signs help to show you the way to safe areas.

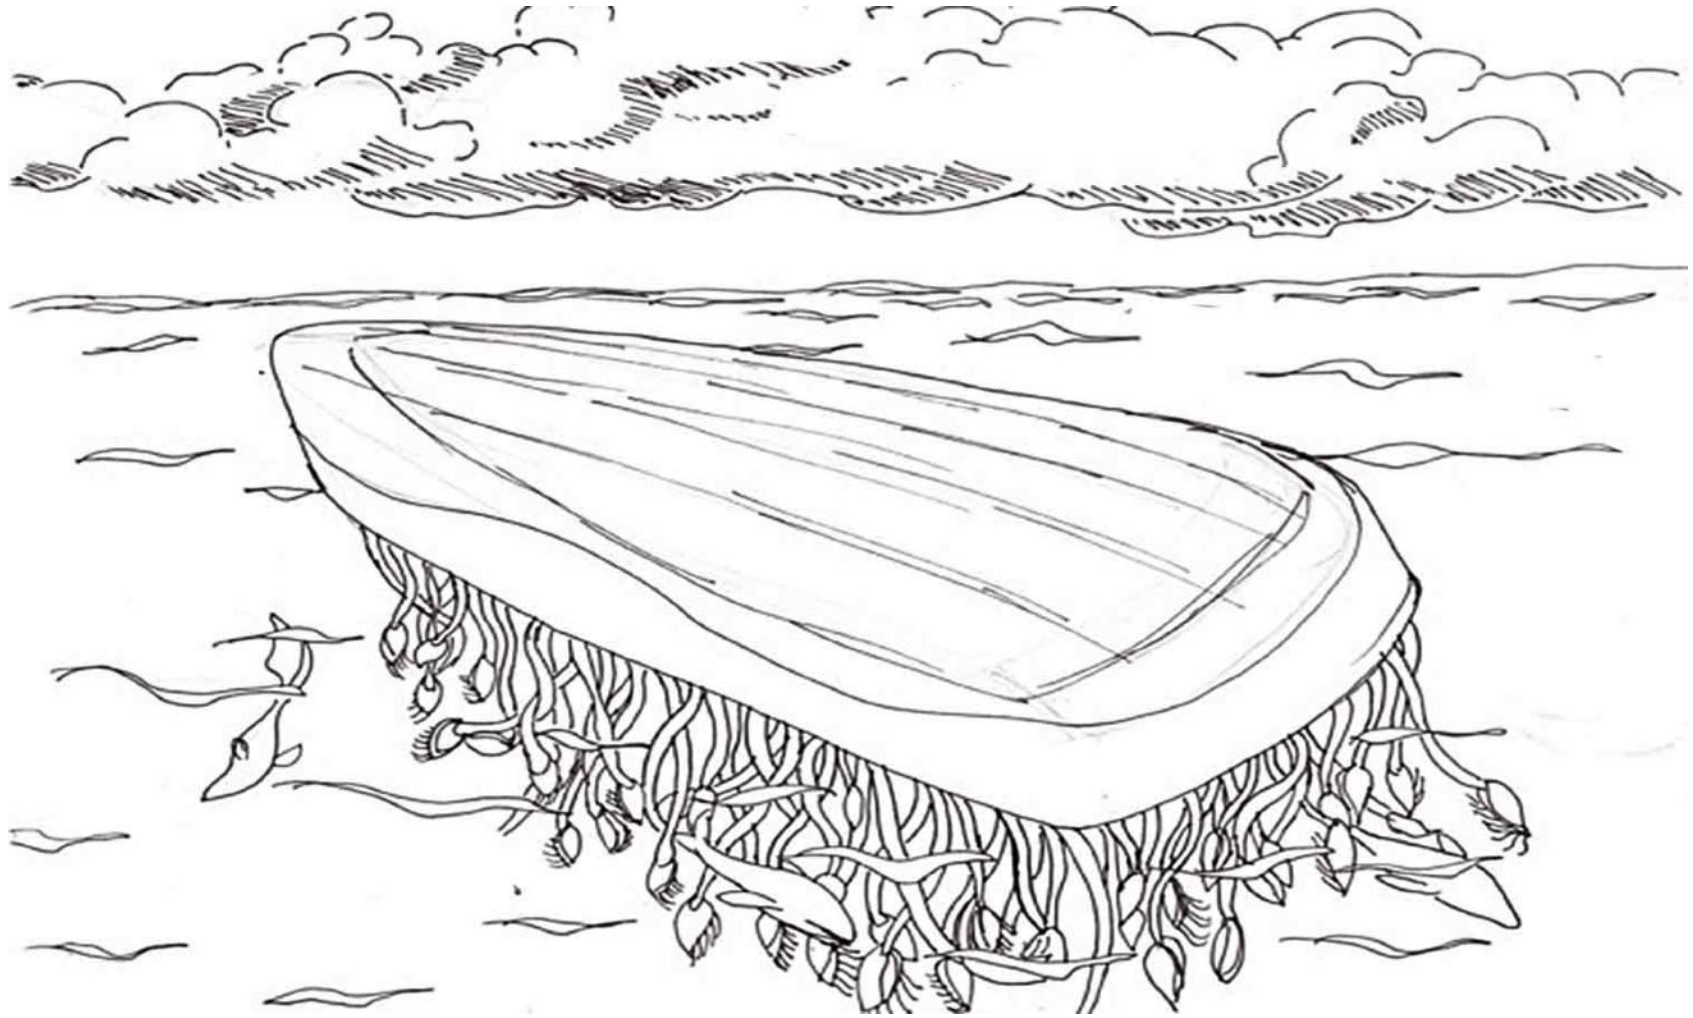

The tsunami in Japan swept Kamome and pieces of docks and buildings out to sea. The waves flipped Kamome upside down. Color the bottom of the boat blue.

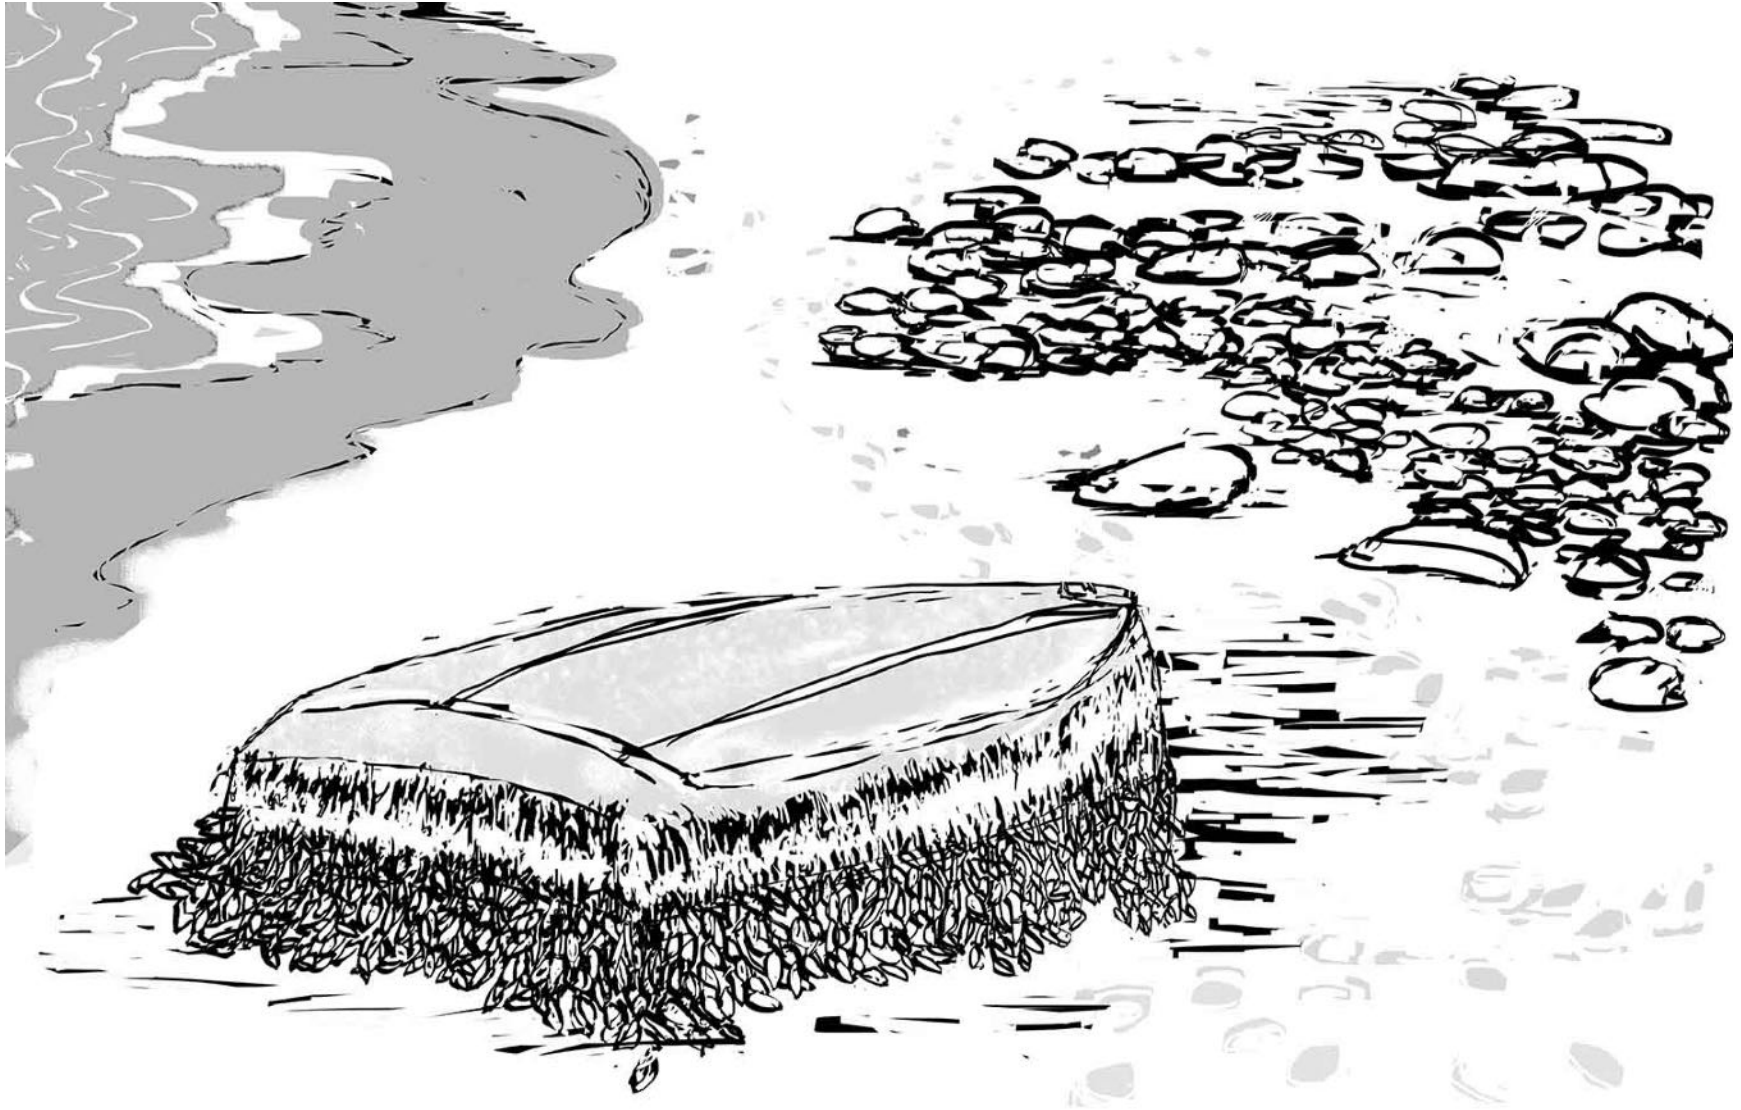

Kamome was alone in the ocean.

Sometimes there were big storms. Can you make the waves look really big?

Sea creatures were Kamome's only companions. Barnacles grew on long necks beneath the boat. Draw other animals in the ocean.

After 757 days at sea, Kamome had traveled all across the ocean and landed on the beach in Crescent City, California.

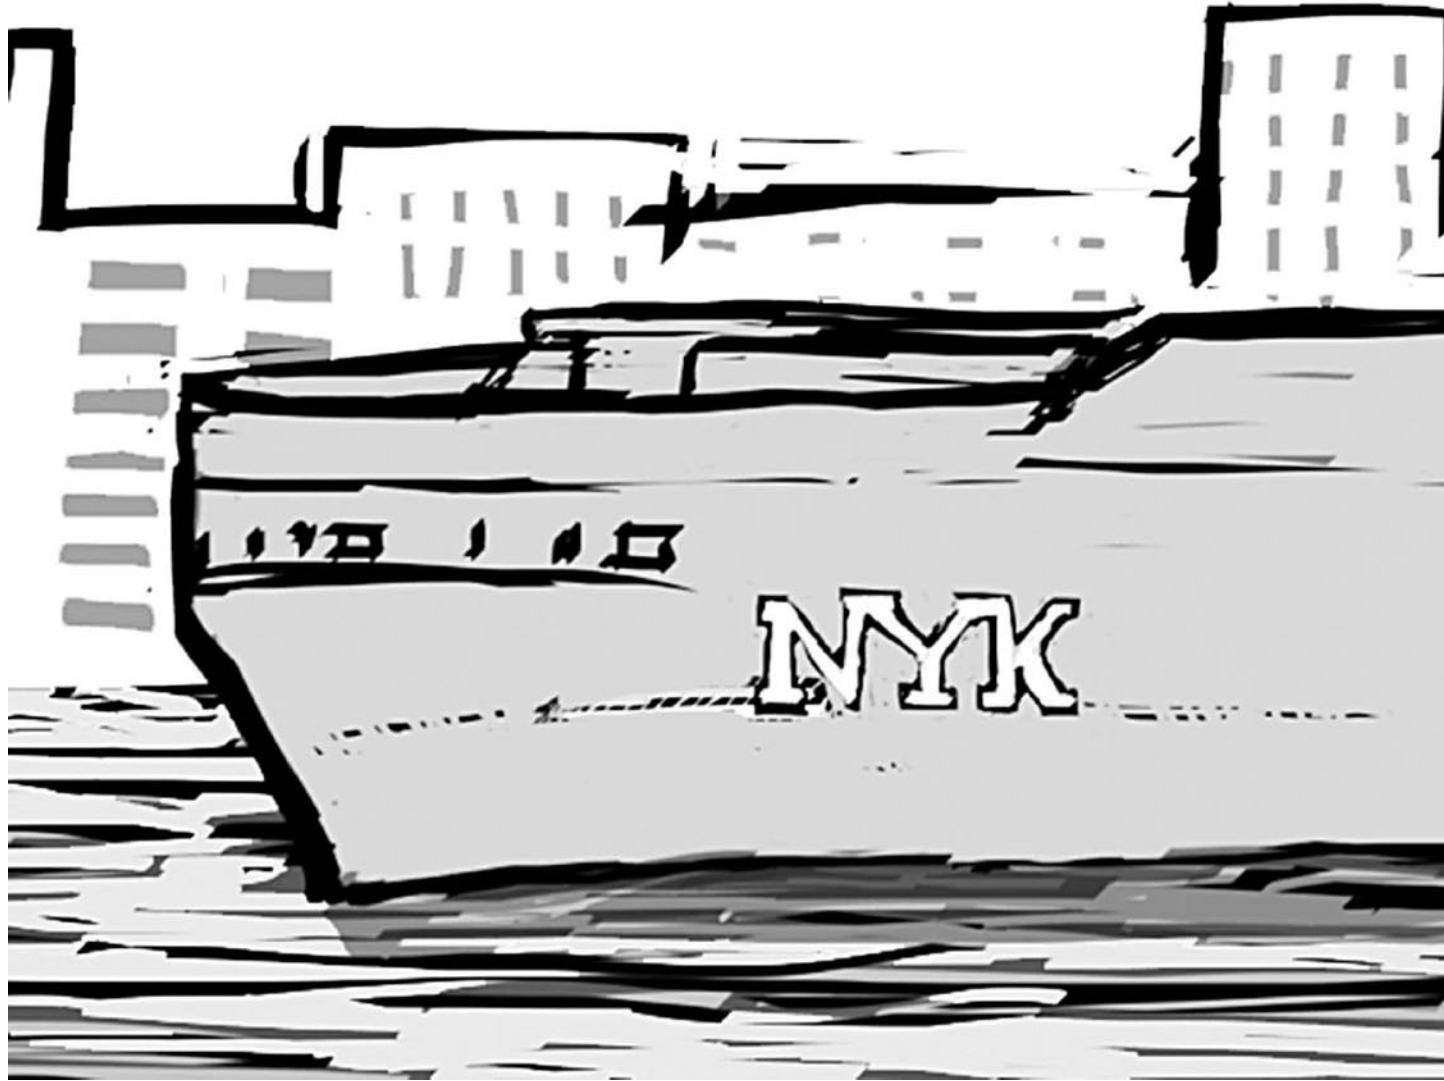

The students from Del Norte High School wondered where the boat had come from.

A Japanese person read the characters on the boat. They said Takata High School.

The students decided to send the boat back to the Japanese High School. Can you help them clean the boat?

Kamome traveled back to Japan in a big ship. Draw the little boat inside the big boat.

The students and teachers at Takata High School were very happy to see Kamome again.

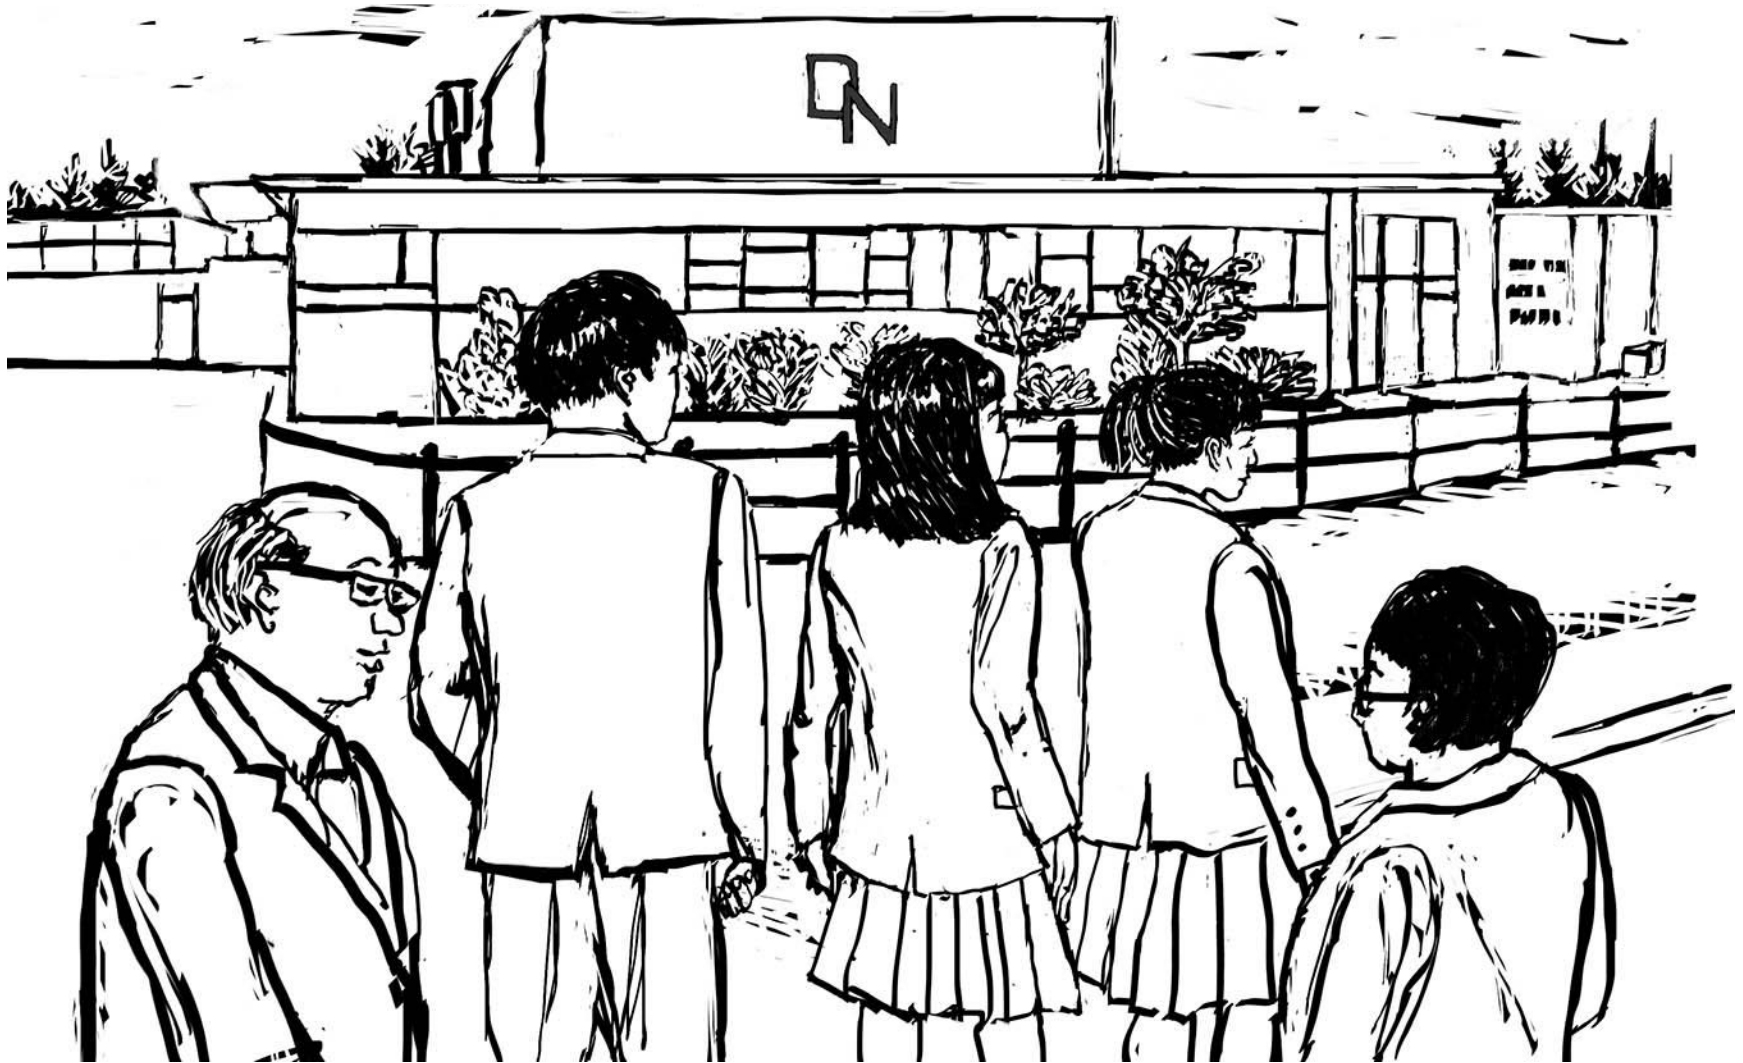

The Japanese students invited the Del Norte students to visit them in Japan. They rode on a bullet train.

The American students were a little concerned about going to Japan. What were some of the things they worried about?

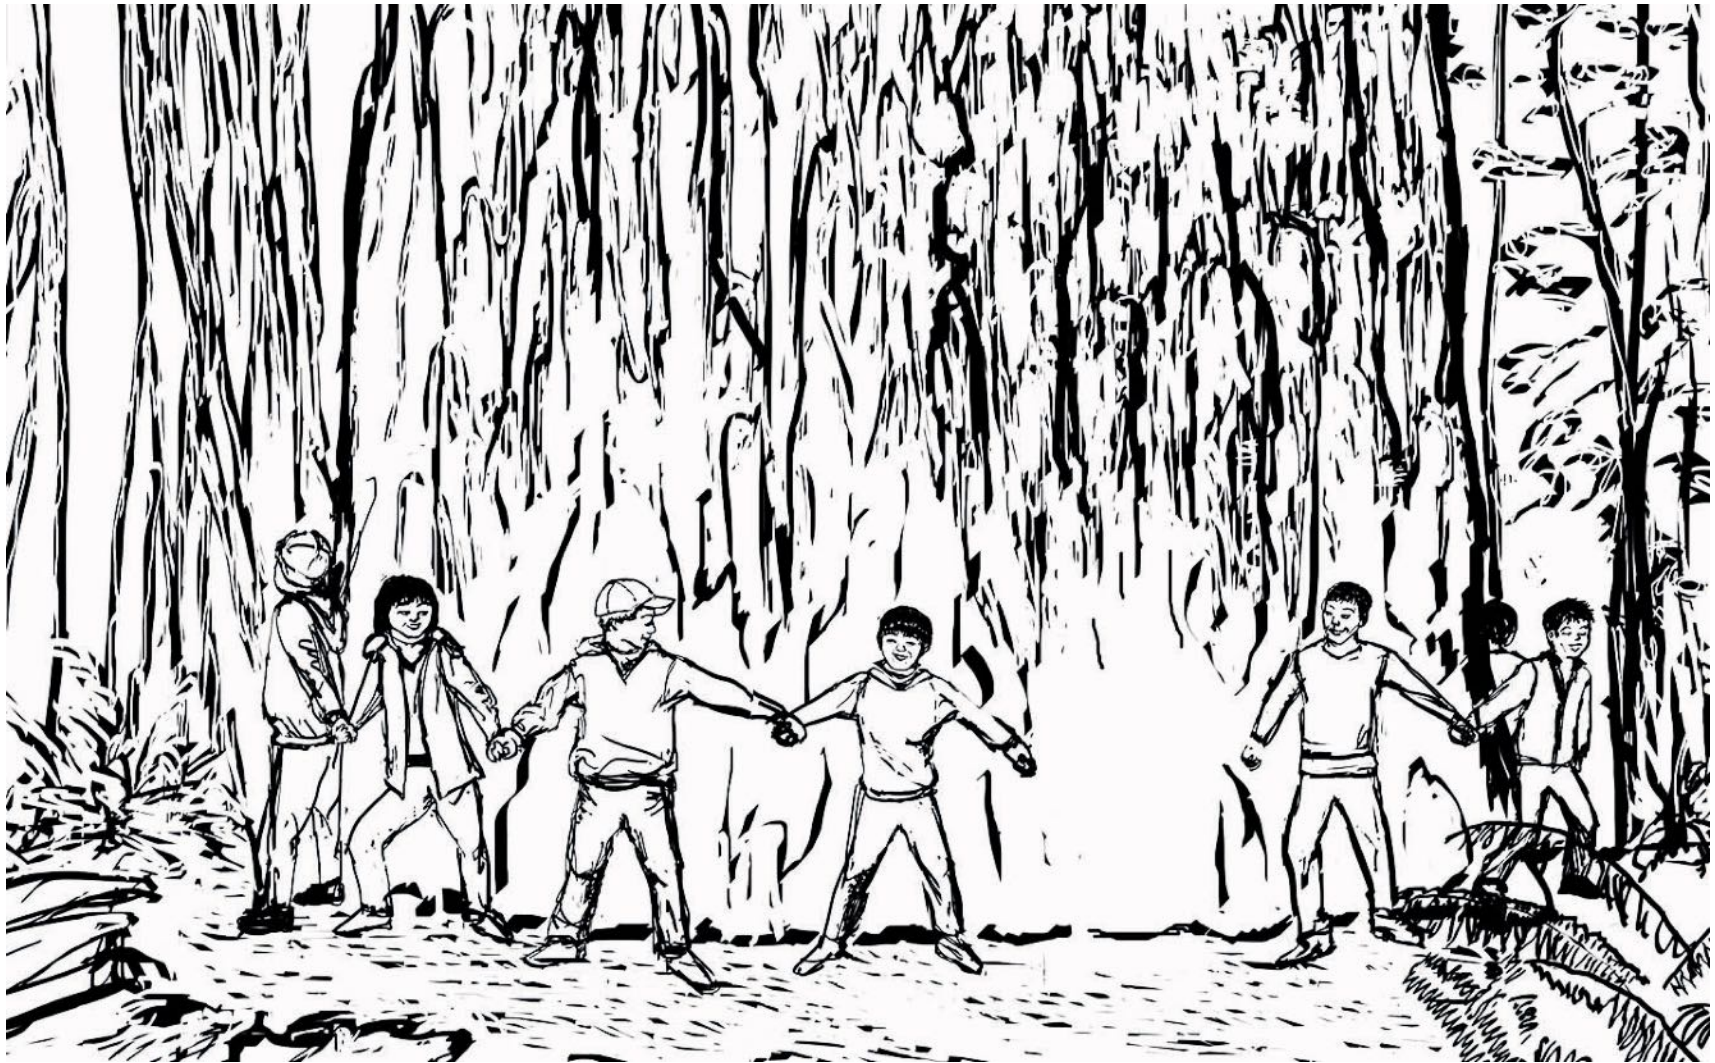

The Japanese and American students became friends.

The Japanese students visited Crescent City.

The Japanese students ate American food. There's an empty plate for you to draw one of your favorite things to eat.

The students from Takata High and Del Norte High visited the Redwood trees. There is a space here for you to join them.

Let's be friends forever!

Can you draw yourself into the space and help hold the boat?
